Being the friend of a person who is going through a traumatic event is never easy. Like throwing a rock into the water, illness has a way to ripple and touch everything around it. Just as your friend is struggling to find their new normal, you are lost trying to find where your friendship lies within it. Emotions such as anger, denial and fear are difficult to deal with, or to know how to react to. Written from the perspective of a person in turmoil, this guide attempts to explain the thought process leading to the reactions and behaviors that can result. If you are lost not knowing what to do, how to help, or what not to, or to say, this guide will help you to make your way through the minefield of being the friend to someone in crisis.
