Chapters of Modern History. Medicean Rome Franz Xaver Kraus

This Chapter takes us to the state of Papal Rome during the days of the Popes of the House of di' Medicis. It is a bird's view of the European affairs from the literary side of it, a good explanation about why the Reform came to be possible, how much the Popes kindled the light of Protestant Revolt against the Catholic Church, and in what way the Renaissance's Masters were endebedted to the Medicean Popes.

I have taken Data from the Wiki to enrich the Original writing of Kraus, to which I have added an introduction to the life of Pietro Aretino. Also portraits from the public treasure.
